

I have chosen nursing as my career. My qualification details include the Bachelors of Science in Commerce from the University of La Salle in March, 1988. I got a degree of B.ScN from the same university in March 1992 and have taken a Masters in nursing degree from Lubbock Christian University in December, 2010. Now, I want to earn my post masters degree from as a Family Nurse Practitioner from Tech University of Texas. Nursing has been my passion even from my early ages.

I believe that a charge nurse executes an important part in order to provide leadership in order to provide care to the patients in therapeutic homes. I have proficient interpersonal skills. I am able to build effective interactions with individuals at every level. I have been a preceptor an intermediate unit of critical care. As a nurse preceptor, I am quite capable to educate the student nurses through a proper educational curriculum. I have a prior tendency to encourage and motivate the upcoming nurse up to the maximum level of function that would make them able to identify a patient's needs and requirements. I have attended many conferences based on the development of such skills including the leadership conference (2009-2010) of Texas Nurses Association, held in Austin, TX and pathways to leadership held yearly at University Medical Center. These conferences have added much skills and information in my nursing practices.

I have been a competent and a dedicated nurse since around past 20 years. I have worked in different fields of surgery and medicine along with the cardiac care units. My experience has been raised very much in dealing with and treating the patients in much critical and complex condition throughout the years of my professional career. As I have worked with the patients in more vulnerable situations, so I have the ability to tackle them whatever the circumstances would be.

In my life, education has always been a factor of much importance. It can be verified by my desire to get a degree of masters in nursing from this university. However, providing care to the patients is extensively gratifying and by serving them I always be satisfied, I consider myself that being a nurse practitioner I can serve the patients more than ever I had. I have a capacity of building a strong link and get more trust from them. I can make more contacts, establish diagnosis, avoid process of disease and supply my services to them who never had an access to health care facilities.

Goals for my profession occupy to work as a mid-level nurse in underprivileged districts of my community. I want to observe patients on daily basis ant to further know regarding dynamics of their families and to encourage best carry outs and educate more to unaware people and mainly to make them realize that for getting success in fighting with disease, prevention is truly essential.

I have come from a poor family of the Philippines. I was capable to accomplish my degrees and poverty never hindered my victories. Many faces of death came in front of me but my inspiration in nursing became increased at time when I participated in the medical mission for Philippines in 2008 voluntarily, where I visited to the poorest region in which the people were living on the areas filled with garbage. That was the region of Payatas in Manila. I provided the vaccinations, therapeutic supplies and other facilities. There, I made an interaction with people who never had any ways to search out any help from the government. For this mission, my volunteer was of entire value. In my experience, this interaction with under privileged crafted an important impact and to make me feel that I am now prepared to be an advanced practitioner that will further polish my skills and capabilities.
